The Pincer is Closing

German forces are gradually being pushed back on most fronts. Allied forces are encircling the largest part of the German forces that remain in Normandy, enclosing them in an area near the Falaise commune, roughly 40 kilometres south-east of Caen.

Due to the runaway success of the combination of Operations Cobra and Bluecoat, German forces have had inadequate opportunity to retreat and regroup.

In fact the German forces in Normandy appear no less fanatical in their cause, and their resolute defence in the area suggests little inclination for a retreat.

This is in spite of the fact that the German situation in the area has become critical. In Falaise, they suffer from a constant bombardment of artillery and air attack.

French forces have reached Alençon south of Falaise, and are surging North to seal off the Germans' only avenue of escape.

A difficulty now lies in ensuring that friendly forces do not fire upon one another. Many allied fronts now face each other directly.

Allied Generals say that this is where Normandy will be won or lost.

STOP THAT COUGH.

Put an Allcock's Plaster high up on the chest. It won't cure you in a minute, but keep it on a reasonable length of time and you will feel the beneficial results.

For the aching back after a Grippy Cold, nothing will benefit you as much as an Allcock's Porous Plaster.

Panzers en Masse

A large force of German Panzers have been repelled in the region of Mortain.

The attack reportedly commenced on 7th August, when a large tank force attempted to penetrate west, and force the allied front back towards the sea.

Their aim appeared to be to cleave the 1st US Army in two, so as to severely limit any mutual support.

The initial attack, launched at midnight, benefitted from two elements. Firstly from the unexpected ferocity of attack from German forces that were thought to be much more diminished. And secondly, from a large fog presence, severely limiting the intervention of allied aircraft.

had a hand in destroying many of the Panzers.

Over the next few days, although bolstered by reinforcements, the Panzer forces were promptly driven back. Without the elements of surprise and weather cover, several American divisions were poised to repel the threat.

In fact, due to the heavy losses of Panzers (said to be around one hundred tanks) the Americans were able to counterattack and liberate the city of Mortain.

Pipeline Experiment goes Awry

A new oil pipeline was laid today between England and France, in a collaboration between oil engineers and British Armed Forces, but there was an unfortunate snag.

The hope was for this to be the first of many pipelines, in order to sustain the resource need of the armed forces currently waging war on the continent.

Unfortunately, though the pipeline was successfully laid yesterday, between Shanklin Chine on the Isle of Wight, and Cherbourg in Northern France, a destroyer escort involved in the operation managed to snag its anchor on the pipe, rupturing it.

It remains to be seen whether or not attempts will be made to lay further pipelines. The idea was to relieve the effort of tankers which are constantly resupplying the steep needs of allied equipment in Normandy. Those tankers are still susceptible to U-boat attack.

Mrs E Carlyse's Recipe for Making Do: Belted Leeks

Ingredients

Method

- 1 lb small thin leeks
- 2 oz bacon rashers
- 1/2 pint of white sauce
- salt and pepper
- dried herbs if wished

- Trim and cook the whole leeks in boiling water until soft enough to eat (about 10-15 minutes)
- Drain well and save some of the leek water for the sauce
- Put the leeks in a heated dish and cover with the white sauce (see recipe for white sauce below)
- Grill the bacon and cut into narrow strips and arrange as belts over the leeks

Minimise the Risk

Many of the casualties caused by shrapnel, bayonet, spent bullets and splinters could be prevented by wearing the 'Crossman Body Shield.'

It is made from the same class steel as the helmets which have proved so valuable in saving life. It is constructed to fit the body for the purpose of deflecting rifle and machine gun fire.

The 'CROSSMAN' BODY SHIELD
(HUNT'S PATENT)

Adjustable, weighs almost unnoticeable, no restriction or discomfort to wearer. Covered khaki with. The top and bottom edges are constructed with a slightly outward curve to prevent bayonet thrusts from glancing off the shield either up or down.
